DR. NICOLE JOHNSON

Dr. Nicole Johnson is an Assistant Professor in the College of Education at Lehigh University. Her research and advocacy work over the past decade has centered on her mission of ending gender-based violence. Dr. Johnson's program of research is dedicated to the exploration and implementation of prevention programming for gender-based violence (e.g., rape, intimate partner violence, trans* violence). She has conducted research on a wide variety of factors related to gender-based violence including cultural norms, social support, social reactions to disclosure, addiction, risky sexual behavior, and chronic health conditions (e.g. HIV, chronic pain). She is also an author of the 5th edition of the Women and Gender: Making a Difference textbook commonly used in psychology of women courses. Dr. Johnson has assisted in the implementation of two shelter-based treatment programs for women with a history of intimate partner violence and created a "bystander-plus" prevention program for college students that incorporates traditional bystander rape prevention programming with feminist consciousness raising techniques.
